Andrea Fisher joins UA Health Sciences

Brings extensive non-profit fundraising experience to the development team

Andrea Fisher joined the development staff of the UA Health Sciences as Senior Director of Development on Monday, Jan. 14, 2019.

In her new role, Fisher will support efforts to raise significant levels of philanthropic support for the UA Health Sciences through prospect identification, cultivation and management of a major and principal gift portfolio. She will work closely with the Associate Vice President and Chief Development Officer for the UA Health Sciences' development team, along with unit heads and directors, to ensure alignment and implementation of all development goals and activities.

Fisher previously served as the CEO of a private, not-for-profit social services organization in Central Pennsylvania, where she was responsible for all major and planned gifts. During her tenure, she expanded community awareness and cultivated philanthropic support for the organization to ensure its growth through long-term stewardship of key stakeholders.

In making the announcement this week, Manon O'Connor, Acting Associate Vice President and Chief Development Officer for the UA Health Sciences, said, "Fisher brings an extraordinary level of fundraising expertise, along with a collaborative style and proven ability to engage and build long-standing relationships with donors. I expect her to have an immediate impact on our fundraising efforts."
